WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—Despite a plight conceded to be critical, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces, aided by a freshly formed battalion of bluejackets and marines, reported today that they had repulsed another Japanese attack on their left flank.

The latest attack was another of a series made under cover of darkness and MacArthur reported to the war department that it was "sharply repulsed."

Meanwhile, the Philippine defenders continued to mop up scattered remnants of Japanese which had landed on the west coast of Bataan and infiltrated behind the American lines.

The defenders not only prevented the main Japanese force from sending reinforcements to advance units, but MacArthur's forces captured most of the food and ammunition dropped to the enemy fighters by parachute.

Situation Critical

Nevertheless, in the face of the valiant efforts by MacArthur and his brave little band of men, the conviction grew in Washington today said that the situation on the Bataan peninsula can be considered nothing less than serious for the defenders.

The Japs are known to have a 10 to 1 superiority in manpower and appear determined to wipe out the American-Filipino army regardless of cost in blood and material.

MacArthur devoted a portion of his report to the war department today to describing the reactions of Japanese soldiers which have been captured.

He stated that captured Nipponese troops told him frankly they were amazed at the humane treatment being given them.

MacArthur reported that the prisoners had been warned by their officers that they would be executed by the Americans if they were captured.

Heartening, however, was the Army's confirmation that seven heavy American bombers had sunk two enemy transports and badly damaged a third at Balikpapan, Borneo, on the Straits of Macassar.

It was the fourth successful bombing raid by U. S. Army bombers in that area. In three previous raids, the bombers sank three transports, damaged two and crippled a cruiser.

OHIO WHEAT VOTE
SCHEDULED MAY 2

Ohio farmers, who voted counter to the national trend in last year's wheat marketing referendum, will ballot on 1942 quotas May 2, Ohio AAA Chairman Elmer Kruse announced Wednesday.

The date for this year's nationwide referendum was set by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard in Washington. It was explained that quotas were proposed because of surplus supplies of wheat from other years.

Approximately 52 percent of Ohio's wheat growers rejected marketing quotas in the 1941 referendum. Approval of two thirds of farmers voting in the referendum is necessary for adoption of the quotas.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Feb. 4 — With only the vaguest description of the suspect to guide them in their search, police and sheriff's deputies scoured southern California today for the brutal slayer of six-year-old Shirley Marie Bell.

The body of the little girl, who had been strangled to death with her bright-hued skipping rope, was found yesterday in a shallow grave in a wild, brush-covered area of Lytle creek, four miles northwest of San Bernardino. The girl had been criminally attacked, according to a preliminary medical examination.

Sheriff E. L. Shay declared that every man in his office will be used in tracking down the slayer, Major General Walter K. Wilson, commanding southern California defenses, pledged Army support in the manhunt. He said that as

DUNKEL STARTS
FIVE YEAR TERM
IN REFORMATORY

Ralph Dunkel, 24, of Walnut Creek pike, sentenced by Judge Mell G. Underwood of the U. S. district court to serve five years in a federal institution for failing to report for induction for Army training, was taken Wednesday to the U. S. Reformatory near Chillicothe.

Dunkel, who classed himself as a conscientious objector, was placed in Class 1-A by the local draft board and was granted a 1-AO classification by the appeals board. A classification of 1-AO lists a registrant as a conscientious objector to combatant service, but does not excuse him from being inducted with regular 1-A men.

The local draft board ordered Dunkel to appear for induction August 12 with a contingent of 1-A men, but the youth failed to appear at the draft office on that date.

He pleaded guilty to a federal indictment charging draft evasion.

Sixteen-year-old Ruth Van Steemburgh, 595 Stewart avenue, Columbus, remains in serious condition in St. Francis hospital, Columbus, while Pickaway and Franklin county officers continue to check a story that she had leaped from an automobile on Route 23 north of Circleville early Tuesday.

Sheriff Charles Radcliff and Deputy Bryan Custer, with Franklin county officers, Tuesday questioned a 27-year-old Columbus man from whose auto the girl was alleged to have leaped as the car traveled south on Route 23 about 1 1/2 miles south of the Franklin county line. The man who deputies said is married and has two children is in Franklin county jail.

Attaches at the hospital report the girl is suffering from a severe scalp laceration, body bruises and a possible skull fracture. The man told officers that he had picked up the girl at a South High street theatre.

Be that as it may, Lutze came as requested to a dinner at Boemmer's political club in Leipzig Platz, chest sticking out and eager to prove himself a good fellow to these foreign correspondents. I sat alongside of him through dinner and drew him out on political questions.

Questioned on War Outlook
"Is it true, Herr Lutze, that you have circulated instructions to the S. A. that war with America is inevitable and that they must get ready for it?" said I boldly.

Lutze, who'd been telling me through the soup and fish courses how he keeps his fingers off foreign politics, rubbed his nose for a few minutes, before answering. "Yes, that is what I have done," he declared. "Yes, we are telling the S. A. to get ready for a war with America. It is inevitable, that war."

This was in February of 1941. His frank confirmation or rumors I'd heard sort of took my breath away, and fitted nicely into other things that came to my ears. But I was puzzled by his frankness. Was he trying to throw me off the track by this direct admission? I stuck to my guns and said: "Why?"

Lutze was ready for that one. He answered:

"We are at war now and it is just a matter of time before the shooting between us begins."

Russians Attempt To Break German Lines

BY LEO V. DOLAN,
International News Service War Editor

A savage battle for mastery of Ambon island in the Dutch East Indies was raging between Dutch and Japanese forces today while the besieged British garrison at Singapore smashed with concentrated artillery fire at gathering Japanese invasion forces on the Malayan mainland.

Fate of Ambon island, and the strong Dutch naval base at Amboina, hung in the balance as the rapidly developing battle swung first in favor of one side and then to advantage of the other. The Dutch were offering vigorous resistance in their efforts to retain control of Ambon, realizing that the Jap attempt to occupy Amboina was part and parcel of yesterday's heavy bombing raid by the Japs on the great naval base at Surabaya on the island of Java.

In Russia, the Soviet armies still were pushing forward on a broad front in their race to engage the main German forces before milder weather permits the enemy to bring the mechanized might of the Nazi forces to bear on the advancing Russians.

SUGAR RATIONS
WILL BE ISSUED
BY STAMP PLAN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—A spokesman for the office of price administration disclosed today that sugar rationing will be accomplished by the use of books of rationing stamps to be issued to each individual in a family.

The rationing will be administered by local boards, already set up to conduct the sale of tires and automobiles, it was stated.

A week ago, Price Administrator Leon Henderson indicated that each individual in a family would be allowed a maximum of three quarters of a pound of sugar per week. Should this be the final rationing amount, the spokesman said, there will be sufficient sugar to "go around" for an indefinite period.

The rationing books, still to be printed, will contain a sufficient number of stamps to permit more than three months of weekly purchases, but not more than one week's supply will be sold at any one time.

THREE CONVICTS
KILLED AS FIRE
STRIKES PRISON

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 4 — Three prisoners were burned to death and 10 others critically injured when fire of undetermined origin broke out in a cell block in the San Diego city jail early today.

Screams of the prisoners locked in the cell block aroused guards who immediately summoned firemen. The blaze was brought under control after a two-hour battle.

Jail officials said the fire was confined to the padded cells, used for violent prisoners. The jail itself is a fireproof stucco structure.

The victims were not immediately identified.

OHIO CLERGYMEN STILL INELIGIBLE FOR TIRES

COLUMBUS, Feb. 4—Clergymen still are ineligible to buy tires under the war rationing rubber program, the Ohio State Defense Council announced today.

Whether the ministry is to be given any preference in the future is still being studied, the council was informed by Frank Bane of Washington, director of field operations for the Office of Price Administration (OPM).

Additional police protection also is being advocated by some of the council members.

Norfolk And Western To Build Spur To Air Base

Line To Be Run From Lockbourne Main Route To Port Site; New Steel Being Installed South Of Chillicothe

Construction of a spur track from Lockbourne north to the Army air base near Groveport was announced Wednesday by officials of the Norfolk and Western Railway company.

About 150 men began work on the project this week, A. V. Osborn, local railroad agent, said.
The line will be between one and one-half and two miles in length connecting the air base with the company's main line in Lockbourne.

Reports from the airport site are that preliminary work is well under way and farmers of the area are making last-minute preparations to leave the location by the last of this month. The 1,583 acres taken over by the government will be purchased from 14 land owners and the project is expected to cost between $8,000,000 and $12,000,000.

The base will be located in Madison township, Franklin county, all being south of Route 665 west of Shook road. The southern-most limit of the base will border on the northern extremity of Madison township, Pickaway county.

The base will be used to train bomber pilots and navigators and between 3,000 and 5,000 cadets will be stationed there.

Mr. Osborn said other railroad expansion projects which may be vital to the Circleville community are under way. At present new steel is being laid between Portsmouth and Chillicothe. The project eventually will move north through Circleville to Columbus, the agent said.

BRUTAL MURDER OF MOTHER OF EIGHT CLEARED

CHICAGO, Feb. 4—The torture murder January 26 of Mrs.
Amalia Fantl, three of whose eight children are serving in the armed forces, was admitted today by William Payne, 64-year-old Negro, the detective bureau announced.

Payne was captured January 27 by William Farley, a barber, as he ran from a beauty shop after binding Miss Helen Weiss to a chair and slashing her with a knife during a robbery.

He immediately was suspected of being the man who killed Mrs.
Fantl in the living quarters in the rear of her toy and notion shop.
Mrs. Fantl had been tied, robbed, attacked, choked and then beaten to death with a hammer.

Two lie detector tests failed to incriminate him and he was to have undergone another today.
But in the early hours of the morning, Detective Sergeant Jack Hanrahan decided to see if he could persuade the suspect to talk by means of kindness. The prisoner was given a steak and otherwise made comfortable.

His confession followed.
Mrs. Fantl was the aunt of Assistant State's Attorney William Bumkirk. One of her sons, Arnold, is in the Philippines with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and two of Arnold's brothers are in army camps in California.

BIG WEST COAST NARCOTICS RING HIT BY ARRESTS

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 4—
Federal narcotics bureau agents were convinced today that one of the biggest dope rings in the country had been broken up, following seizure of heroin valued at from $750,000 to $900,000 and the arrest of three men.

The dope was smuggled in from an American boat arriving from China recently and was found stored in a San Francisco warehouse.

Arrested were Alexander Stanger, 35, Robert Ridgill, 33, and Raymond Kim, 33, all seamen.

Their arrest followed less than a week after the detention of 19 Negroes, described by agents as "heavy users" of heroin, which suddenly appeared on the addict market about two weeks ago.

DUNKEL STARTS FIVE YEAR TERM IN REFORMATORY

Mel G. Underwood of the U. S. district court to serve five years in a federal institution for failing to report for induction for Army training, was taken Wednesday to the U. S. Reformatory near Chil-

Dunkel, who classed himself as a conscientious objector, was placed in Class 1-A by the local draft appear at the draft office on that date.

He pleaded guilty to a federal indictment charging draft eva-

Sixteen-year-old Ruth Van

Franklin county officers continue alleged to have leaped as the car traveled south on Route 23 about

The man told officers that he had picked up the girl at a South

SUGAR RATIONS WILL BE ISSUED BY STAMP PLAN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4—A spokesman for the office of price administration disclosed today that sugar rationing will be accomplished by the use of books of rationing stamps to be issued to each individual in a family.

The rationing will be administered by local boards, already set up to conduct the sale of tires and automobiles, it was stated.
A week ago, Price Administrator Leon Henderson indicated that each individual in a family would be allowed a maximum of three quarters of a pound of sugar per week. Should this be the final rationing amount, the spokesman said, there will be sufficient sugar to "go around" for an indefinite period.

The rationing books, still to be printed, will contain a sufficient number of stamps to permit more than three months of weekly purchases, but not more than one week's supply will be sold at any one time.

THREE CONVICTS KILLED AS FIRE STRIKES PRISON

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Feb. 4—Three prisoners were burned to death and 10 others critically injured when fire of undetermined origin broke out in a cell block in the San Diego city jail early today.

Screams of the prisoners locked in the cell block aroused guards who immediately summoned firemen. The blaze was brought under control after a two-hour battle.

Jail officials said the fire was confined to the padded cells, used for violent prisoners. The jail itself is a fireproof stucco structure.

The victims were not immediately identified.

OHIO CLERGYMEN STILL INELIGIBLE FOR TIRES

COLUMBUS, Feb. 4—Clergymen still are ineligible to buy tires under the war rationing rubber program, the Ohio State Defense Council announced today.

Whether the ministry is to be given any preference in the future is still being studied, the council was informed by Frank Bane of Washington, director of field operations for the Office of Price Administration (OPM).

ORDINANCE FOR REFUND OF BONDS IS PREPARED

Solicitor J. W. Adkins said Wednesday that he would submit to council Wednesday night an ordinance to refund $10,000 worth of bonds expiring in 1942, the funds from which will go into the city's general fund.

If the measure passes council several additional appropriations may be added to the 1942 budget.
Most important of these is the reestablishment of street lighting.
No funds were appropriated for street lighting when council passed its budget.

Additional police protection also is being advocated by some of the council members.

This was in February of 1941.
His frank confirmation or rumors I'd heard sort of took my breath away, and fitted nicely into other things that came to my ears. But I was puzzled by his frankness. Was he trying to throw me off the track by this direct admission? I stuck to my guns and said: "Why?"

Lutze was ready for that one.
He answered:
"We are at war now and it is just a matter of time before the shooting between us begins."

hammering Japanese transports on the Malayan mainland at Johore Bahru, facing Singapore, and told of continued Jap air attacks.

These raids, the communique said, "caused damage and a few military casualties."

Dispatches from Batavia indicated that further attacks on Japanese shipping in Macassar straits by united nations ships and planes are expected. They added that considerable damage was inflicted on the city of Surabaya, Java, by yesterday's Jap air attack on that important Netherlands East Indies naval base.

Japanese bombers attacked Rangoon at midnight, causing a few casualties. On the Burma front, Jap forces were pressing a furious assault on British positions along the Salween river.

U. S. Planes Help

On this front, American volunteer fighting planes escorted a squadron of British Blenheim bombers which bombed Japanese troops with devastating effect, surprising the Japs as they sought to gain bridgeheads in the Salween river sector. Jap boasts of having crossed the river were unconfirmed from any responsible source.

There was little fresh news from the Libyan war theatre save that heavy fighting still was in progress between British forces and axis columns west of the strategic supply port of Derna.

On the Russian front, according to Moscow dispatches, the Soviets were engaged in a wholesale advance, aided by stormtroop dive-bombers which dealt smashing blows from the skies at the retreating Germans.

On the blood-stained front west of Moscow, it was stated, advancing Russian forces now are within striking distance of both Vyazma and Smolensk.

for it and to accustom our people to this eventuality. It will help a lot to remove the shock of having yet another powerful enemy lining up against us. The public won't mind as long as it is made fully aware of the development beforehand.

Spreading the News Around

That is why we are working hard now to spread the news around, first through the S. A., then through the army and then through the public-at-large.

I asked:

"How long do you think the war will last then? There is an idea floating around it will be finished in 1941. Even some speeches have suggested as much."

"The war cannot finish before 1943, at the earliest," Lutze said. "You Americans will see to that. But we Nazis will win the war long or short as it may be."

As I said, that was at the beginning of 1941, and figuring back now, it is easy to guess how thoroughly and systematically Hitler plotted and prepared the war against America. It all comes out in the wash.

After dinner, Lutze and the bunch of us took over the bar, where champagne began to flow freely. The weather over Berlin was pretty bad and there was small chance of air alarm, so we could take our time. For the next two hours we talked of everything under the sun, pumping his Nazi mind on all topics of interest, while the cigarette smoke and long draughts of champagne heated up the atmosphere. Lutze, like most Nazis, slugged down a full glass at a time and laughed at slower imbibers like myself.

Boasts of Drinking Ability

"Here, drink like a man," he said boastfully after the sixth bottle. "Look at me. Every morning at six I'm up for a horseback ride. I ride two hours and tire out three horses before I go to breakfast. Then, if weather and time permits during the day, I get into my plane and ride around in the clouds for a couple of hours. Freshens you up. I'm always on the go till after midnight and drink my fill to boot. Down with it, Prosit!"

I checked up on his routine on the quiet a few days later and found that he told the truth. They're all like that, these men around Hitler. Restless and ever busy proving to themselves and others what a super-race they are. At times it gets little tiresome. Lutze also began telling us about the wild horses he tames or rides bare-back in Westphalia, roping them in with lassos in the manner of our cowboys. That, too, proved itself correct and I discovered that some four to five hundred horses are running wild in the hills there.

"Did I ever show you my favorite trick?" Lutze said suddenly, after draining enough champagne to float a ship. He took his champagne glass and filled it to the brim, saying:

"It scares a lot of women out of their wits and Hitler gets a good laugh out of it. He has me pull this one at state banquets or when things get boring and he wants to get rid of the old wives who hang around too long. It breaks the ice when there are too many stuffed shirts and their women sitting at the table and some of them faint. Look!"

boot. He opened his mouth to show that he had swallowed the glass eye, but a moment later he made as if to belch hard and out came the glass eye.

He wiped it indifferently amidst his own shouted laughter and replaced it in the left eye socket. There was, I must say, scarcely anything to betray that false eye, unless the light happened to reflect too strongly in the glass.

'Perfectly Simple'

"There you are, perfectly simple," he said with a sweeping gesture. "You should hear them shriek!"

"And what does Hitler do?"

"He laughs to himself and never lets on that he has seen me do it. He is a better actor than some of our stage and film stars. It's a good way to get rid of some of those ancients."

This guy Lutze reminded me a good deal of Walter Funk, the chubby and round-faced little man picked by Hitler to succeed Schacht of the high collar as president of the Reichsbank and Finance Minister.

Funk, formerly right-hand man for Joe Goebbels, likes to act natural too and rid himself of official starchiness. At a banquet given by the foreign press corps in 1939 before the war, Funk threw caution to the winds and before all eyes navigated toward the orchestra. He waved the orchestra leader aside and seizing his baton, went to town ripping off the speed and the notes as he thought the job should be done. He fell on his back once, but we picked him up, brushed off his dinner clothes, and the show went on. Hjalmar Schacht would never have done that.

Guests of Stage Star

A few weeks later, on a sultry autumn night, the foreign press (a dozen of the important ones) were guests at the beautiful villa amidst a park-like scene and lake of Gustaf Grunden, stage and film star Number 1 in the Reich and also director of the State Theater in Berlin under Goering's patronage.

The feast began before midnight at tables set out on the lawn like an open-air restaurant, with torches stuck in the ground casting off an eerie reddish light. It was typically Hollywood, and a gypsy band slightly hidden under the trees played appropriate music.

Pert little stars from film and stage were there to enliven the interest and the scene, all of which contributed to a gay night. Funk was there, too, sleepily enjoying one bottle of champagne after another. At three a. m. the girls discovered that the water was lukewarm and a swim in the lake would pep everyone up. Off came clothes and soon a dozen boys and girls were swimming in the moonlight, the white of their bodies showing through the clear water.

Removes Clothing

Funk strolled leisurely down to the lakeside, a bottle of champagne in his hand. Without once giving it second thought, the Reich Minister for Finance and President of Hitler's Reichbank, removed every stitch of clothing and revealed a body not unlike a beer barrel on stilts.

Standing there as nature cast him while the girls and boys in the water and outside of it shrieked with delight, he finished his champagne with much gurgling and then dropped himself into the lake with the splash of an elephant. For over an hour there was splashing and shrieking as girls and boys and Hitler's minister disported happily in the water, waiting for the moon to go down.

Circleville Elks conducted their annual past exalted rulers' night Tuesday when several hundred members of the lodge and 30 Washington C. H. Elks gathered at the lodge home for a splendid dinner, an initiation of five candidates and a social evening.

Former officers of the lodge conducted the initiation of Wayne Hoover, William Dunlap, Floyd P. Dunlap, Christopher Murphy and Paul Bartholomew. Eliot J. Henry, who was exalted ruler in 1917-18, served as the officer in charge. He was assisted by other past exalted rulers including Melvin A. Yates, Warren H. Baker, Glen R. Geib, Paul H. Betz, Dr. R. F. Lilly, A. J. Lyle, Joe W. Adkins and Leland Pontius.

Numerous other past exalted rulers including Judge Meeker Terwilliger, Orrin Gessley, Lutz May, Charles H. May, Ray W. Davis, Andrew U. Thomas and Ferd M. Pickens, Joe Work, a member of the Circleville lodge and exalted ruler of the Alexandria, Ind., lodge in 1907, was also present. Dr. D. V. Courtright, exalted ruler in 1901-1902, attended the earlier part of the meeting but missed the introduction.

A baked ham dinner was served at 6:30 by Jimmy Carpenter and his crew, and the lodge meeting followed immediately. Music by the lodge chorus aided in the program.

After the initiation an excellent entertainment was provided. The lodge voted Tuesday evening to accept a gift of the old Grand theatre organ, presented by the family of the late Walker Baughman. The organ will be installed in the lodge room. The organ has been inspected by several experts who have pronounced it in perfect condition. Mr. Baughman was exalted ruler of the lodge for five terms.

The girl, a dancer of considerable talent despite her tender age, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bell of San Bernardino.

Her body was found by Policeman Lee I. Ross and two Mexican searchers who followed bicycle tracks discovered on a dirt roadway. The tracks revealed tragic-

For a short distance the two walked along together, with the man pushing the bicycle. Then there were signs of a struggle as the little girl evidently put up a fight for her life. Sagebrush and cactus were broken and trampled.

Buried in Sandbank

The tracks in the sand then showed that the slayer dragged the child's body for almost 100 yards to a sandbank where he buried her by placing her body close to the sandbank and then caving the bank over the body.

A corner of Shirley's red lunchbox sticking up through the sand marked her improvised grave.

for it and to accustom our people to this eventuality. It will help a lot to remove the shock of having yet another powerful enemy lining up against us. The public won't mind as long as it is made fully aware of the development beforehand.

Spreading the News Around

That is why we are working hard now to spread the news around, first through the S. A., then through the army and then through the public-at-large."

"The war cannot finish before 1943, at the earliest," Lutz said. "You Americans will see to that. But we Nazis will win the war long or short as it may be."

As I said, that was at the beginning of 1941, and figuring back now, it is easy to guess how thoroughly and systematically Hitler plotted and prepared the war against America. It all comes out in the wash.

After dinner, Lutz and the bunch of us took over the bar, where champagne began to flow freely. The weather over Berlin was pretty bad and there was small chance of air alarm, so we could take our time. For the next two hours we talked of everything under the sun, pumping his Nazi mind on all topics of interest, while the cigarette smoke and long draughts of champagne heated up the atmosphere. Lutz, like most Nazis, slugged down a full glass at a time and laughed at slower imbibers like myself.

Boasts of Drinking Ability

"Here, drink like a man," he said boastfully after the sixth bottle. "Look at me. Every morning at six I'm up for a horseback ride. I ride two hours and tire out three horses before I go to breakfast. Then, if weather and time permits during the day, I get into my plane and ride around in the clouds for a couple of hours. Freshens you up. I'm always on the go till after midnight and drink my fill to boot. Down with it, Prosit!"

I checked up on his routine on the quiet a few days later and found that he told the truth. They're all like that, these men around Hitler. Restless and ever busy proving to themselves and others what a super-race they are. At times it gets little tiresome.

Lutz also began telling us about the wild horses he tames or rides bare-back in Westphalia, roping them in with lassos in the manner of our cowboys. That, too, proved itself correct and I discovered that some four to five hundred horses are running wild in the hills there.

"Did I ever show you my favorite trick?" Lutz said suddenly, after draining enough champagne to float a ship. He took his champagne glass and filled it to the brim, saying:

"It scares a lot of women out of their wits and Hitler gets a good laugh out of it. He has me pull this one at state banquets or when things get boring and he wants to get rid of the old wives who hang around too long. It breaks the ice when there are too many stuffed shirts and their women sitting at the table and some of them faint. Look!"

Laughing and shouting, he reached up to his left eye and neatly removed the eyeball, dropping it into his champagne with a deft twist of the hand. Then he stirred the drink and gulped down the whole works, champagne with glass eye to boot.

B. P. O. E. STAGES EVENT IN HONOR OF PAST RULERS

Circleville Elks conducted their annual past exalted rulers' night Tuesday when several hundred members of the lodge and 30 Washington C. H. Elks gathered at the lodge home for a splendid dinner, an initiation of five candidates and a social evening.

Former officers of the lodge conducted the initiation of Wayne Hoover, William Dunlap, Floyd P. Dunlap, Christopher Murphy and Paul Bartholomew. Elliot J. Henry, who was exalted ruler in 1917-18, served as the officer in charge. He was assisted by other past exalted rulers including Melvin A. Yates, Warren H. Baker, Glen R. Gebb, Paul H. Betz, Dr. R. F. Lilly, A. J. Lyle, Joe W. Adams and Leland Pontius.

Numerous other past exalted rulers including Judge Meeker Terwilliger, Orrin Gessley, Lutz May, Charles H. May, Ray W. Davis, Andrew U. Thomas and Ferd M. Pickens. Joe Work, a member of the Circleville lodge and exalted ruler of the Alexandria, Ind. lodge in 1907, was also present. Dr. D. V. Courtwright, exalted ruler in 1901-1902, attended the earlier part of the meeting but missed the introduction.

A baked ham dinner was served at 6:30 by Jimmy Carpenter and his crew, and the lodge meeting followed immediately. Music by the lodge chorus aided in the program.

After the initiation an excellent entertainment was provided.

The lodge voted Tuesday evening to accept a gift of the old Grand theatre organ, presented by the family of the late Walker Baughman. The organ will be installed in the lodge room. The organ has been inspected by several experts who have pronounced it in perfect condition. Mr. Baughman was exalted ruler of the lodge for five terms.

Guests Of Stage Star

A few weeks later, on a sultry autumn night, the foreign press (a dozen of the important ones) were guests at the beautiful villa amidst a park-like scene and lake of Gustaf Gruendgens, stage and film star Number 1 in the Reich and also director of the State Theater in Berlin under Goering's patronage.

The feast began before midnight at tables set out on the lawn like an open-air restaurant, with torches stuck in the ground casting off an eerie reddish light. It was typically Hollywood, and a gypsy band slightly hidden under the trees played appropriate music.

Pert little stars from film and stage were there to enliven the interest and the scene, all of which contributed to a gay night. Funk was there, too, sleepily enjoying one bottle of champagne after another. At three a. m. the gals discovered that the water was lukewarm and a swim in the lake would pep everyone up. Off came clothes and soon a dozen boys and girls were swimming in the moonlight, the white of their bodies showing through the clear water.

Removes Clothing

Funk strolled leisurely down to the lakeside, a bottle of champagne in his hand. Without once giving it second thought, the Reich Minister for Finance and President of Hitler's Reichbank, removed every stitch of clothing and revealed a body not unlike a beer-barrel on stilts.

Standing there as nature cast him while the girls and boys in the water and outside of it shrieked with delight, he finished his champagne with much gurgling and then dropped himself into the lake with the splash of an elephant. For over an hour there was splashing and shrieking as girls and boys and Hitler's minister disported happily in the water, waiting for the moon to go down.

They could furnish only a meager description of the man. H. C. Boone, a rancher, said Shirley was crying and appeared to be riding against her will.

The girl, a dancer of considerable talent despite her tender age, was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bell of San Bernardino.

Her body was found by Policeman Lee I. Ross and two Mexican searchers who followed bicycle tracks discovered on a dirt roadway. The tracks revealed tragic-

'SHOW BUILDER' TO VISIT CITY FOR INSPECTION

A stunningly-designed motor unit, decorated with brilliant photographs in full color of the world's greatest stars and known as the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer traveling show builder, will arrive in Circleville Thursday at 10 a. m. to pay a visit to the Circle Theatre.

The show builder is the first of a fleet of traveling advertising, exploitation and publicity offices on wheels which will tour the nation and visit the smaller cities and towns in an effort to assist motion picture exhibitors in bringing greater audiences to their theatres.

Unique in design, the unit carries a complete modern office in its interior, including a 16 mm. projector which will be used to show exhibitors trailers on forthcoming M-G-M releases; a desk, reception room, filing cabinets, cubbyholes for sample heralds, press sheets and other accessories, and a corner fitted with a novel voice-recording machine which will permit the theatre manager to converse with the representative in charge of the show.

Buried in Sandbank

The tracks in the sand then showed that the slayer dragged the child's body for almost 100 yards to a sandbank where he buried her by placing her body close to the sandbank and then caving the bank over the body.

A corner of Shirley's red lunchbox sticking up through the sand marked her improvised grave.

NO POLITICS HERE

PATRICK J. Hurley, secretary of war under Hoover, has just been appointed a brigadier-general by President Roosevelt. He will not have command of a regular army unit, but will serve as a special agent.

The appointment emphasizes anew the non-partisan character of this war. With such well-known Republicans in high position as Secretaries Stimson and Knox, Lieutenant-General Knudsen, and now Hurley, there is no place left for everyday partisan sniping.

Not all our other wars have been free of politics. Though Lincoln appointed McClellan, a Democrat, to the chief command of the army, it was thought necessary to pick some other generals whose chief recommendations were political. Banks had been speaker of the House of Representatives, McClelland and Butler had been prominent War Democrats and therefore had followings whom it was desired to win over, Fremont was the former Republican candidate for the presidency. None of these appointments turned out well.

The Spanish War, too, had its political favorites. General Shafter, who was so fat that he could not sit a horse, was in charge of the Cuban campaign, instead of the far more capable Nelson A. Miles.

President Wilson turned his back on such undesirable precedents. World War I had no political generals. It is fortunate that President Roosevelt is following his example.

A SOLID FRONT

THE success of the "good neighbor" policy that we have pursued is seen in the practically unanimous front that the Latin American nations are presenting against the axis powers. Time has been when jealousy of the United States would have combined with mutual rivalries to make any solid phalanx impossible, and would have provided a fertile field for Nazi intrigues.

Even Argentina and Chile, which have sought modifications of the anti-axis manifesto, are not really exceptions. Their stand is apparently not actuated either by love of Germany or hatred of this country, but by the internal problems they face, thanks to the infiltration of Germans and Italians. The Pan-American conference has brought to pass the boast of Canning, the English statesman who encouraged the United States to proclaim the Monroe Doctrine: "I called the New World into being to redress the balance of the Old."

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

REFERENCES to World War I and World War II are deprecated by some few commentators, on the ground that designating wars by number implies acceptance of them as periodically inevitable forever, or on until the world's end, anyway.

Charles P. Stewart

There isn't as much of this kind of talk now, though, as there was during World War I. There was a lot of it then, and "Never again" was a regular motto for a matter of years after the end of that particular No. 1 experience. Today there isn't enough pacifism in the atmosphere to speak of. Even the pre-Pearl Harbor isolationists mostly are all-out belligerents at the situation's present stage.

Now, will we have another pacifistic epidemic following experience No. 2, as we did the last time?

I'm inclined to doubt it. My impression is that critics of war-numbering are right—that the generality of folk are converts to the proposition that vast conflicts are a certainty, about every so often, as long as the earth continues to be inhabited by human beings.

Wars didn't use to have to be numbered. They were numerous, but comparatively local—the Revolutionary war, the War of 1812, the Mexican war, the war between the states (Civil war), the Spanish-American war, the Russo-Japanese war, and farther back, the Wars of the Roses, and centuries of still earlier affairs, indefinitely to so-called civilization's rearward, just as we may have an infinite future of them.

Many Were Local
However, a majority of those past clashes were between a couple of countries only. It was simple enough to speak of the Crimean war, fought in just one little spot on the globe. It's more complicated to mention the Anglo-American-Canadian - Australian - Filipino-Malay - Chinese - Russian - Dutch - East Indian - Japanese-German-Italian war, not counting France and a whole galaxy of temporarily overrun nationalities that will be entitled to notice in the long run. World War II is an easier name to call it by.

But is it going to be possible to establish everlasting peace at the end of it?

That was what was tried before and there was considerable hopefulness that it could be accomplished. This time I don't believe that there's much such hopefulness. Anyway, it surely won't be attempted by the same method as the one we and some of the other powers experimented with in the 1920's.

The idea then was all-around disarmament.

Its advocates meant exceedingly well. Their theory was that the nations not only wouldn't but couldn't fight if they hadn't any equipment to fight with.

Knives and Pitchforks

A very small scattering of statesmen argued that they always would be able to scare up carving knives and pitchforks for warlike purposes, if they felt like fighting—that disarmament wouldn't do the business; that the only correct system was to cure them of the desire to take the warpath.

The odd thing was that the genuine pacifists were the ones who didn't think that disarmament alone would cure them.

They didn't, though, suggest any convincing - sounding alternative remedy for the disease, so the inherently pugnacious outfit administered theirs—the disarmament dose. And look how it's worked!

Of course, one difficulty was that the Axis bunch of today didn't take the disarmament dope that was prescribed for them. They were armed by bootleggers while the democracies honestly were laying off the stuff. It wasn't a case of total abstinence by all concerned, but that can't be absolutely guaranteed, apparently.

Among the reasons why future peace preachers don't take well at the current juncture is this one: There hasn't been a sufficient interval, between World Wars I and II, for folk to have forgotten No. 1's lessons. Some of us have grown up in the meantime, but a great many of us remember our 1914-18 education and grasp the futility of our effort of the 1920's to prevent a 1939-and-later repetition of the 1914-18 course of instruction.

Nature and Treatment Of Mucous Colitis Cases

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE TERM colitis, so commonly used today, means nearly anything to the average person from a feeling of discomfort in the abdomen to serious irregularity of the intestines. "Irritable colon"

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

(the colon is the large intestine) is probably a better term.

Mucous colitis has a much narrower meaning and applies to a special group of cases of unstable colon and periodic attacks of mucous diarrhea, alternating with constipation. There is always a sense of fullness or tightness, if not actually cramping in the abdomen. "Tension headache" is common.

It is a fairly common disease, certainly a troublesome one—hardly a mail comes to me without three or four letters asking for advice on this subject. The condition is often misdiagnosed. It is probably responsible for the removal of more undiseased appendices than any other one cause—the appendix is removed in 75 per cent of cases. It may result in chronic invalidism. Most of the sufferers are victims of the cathartic habit. It accompanies many of the states of emotional tension encountered in daily life.

Nervous Tension

Emotional tension—nervous tension—that is the first impression the patient with mucous colitis gives. This has suggested to two Boston physicians a study of the physiological and emotional reaction of their patients.

It is a disease of early adult life—the average age of onset is twenty-three years. Examining the patient, the colon can often be felt through the abdominal walls as a tender, rubber-like tube. The inside of the bowel shows great engorgement with dilated blood vessels and the mucous membrane covered with glairy mucus. The X-ray examination shows a small, tense colon. When seen with an electric light tube, the mucous membrane is angry and red, but with no ulceration.

All this shows a reaction of the vegetative nervous system. Though it was once regarded as an infection, a causative organism has never been found. Every indication points to the idea that the trouble is not in the bowel, but is a general state of the body—a state of tension of the nervous system.

A careful psychological study showed that in half the patients, the attacks were always precipitated by some emotional upset—the breaking off of an engagement, in one case, disappointment in a college career in another. Nearly always these develop on the basis of an unstable nervous system. Anxiety states, either with real or fancied bases, were characteristic of a quarter of the patients; a morbid interest—hypochondriasis—affected another fourth.

It is evident that treatment directed at the colon alone is not going to be successful. Everything should be done to relieve irritation of the colon. The cathartic habit should be broken up—no matter how much the patient thinks the tension felt could be relieved by a cathartic, it always makes it worse. A smooth diet such as the following is helpful.

Diet

Breakfast: Orange sections, corn flakes, poached egg, crisp bacon, crabsapple jelly, toast, butter, cream, weak tea or coffee.

Dinner: Cream of potato soup, broiled halibut steak, boiled potatoes, spinach, jelly—whipped cream, bread, butter, milk, weak tea.

Supper: Cream of mushroom soup, grilled lamb chop and noodles, ice cream, plain cake, bread, butter, milk, weak tea.

But the great feature in treatment is directed at adjustment of the nervous system to demands and realities of life. It seems queer that a happy marriage can sometimes cure constipation but it has done so.

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

MOLLA watched anxiously as the gray-haired country doctor examined Tay.

It had taken two hours to get to the nearest small town, and Tay still was unconscious.

The doctor's experienced fingers explored Tay's thick hair. Suddenly he stopped. "I think I've found it," he said quietly. "That arm wasn't the only injury he received. He also sustained a terrific blow on the head."

The doctor explored some more. "We'd better get him to a hospital," he announced. "There's one in the next town, about 20 miles from here. There's no telling what these head blows can amount to."

He felt Tay's pulse again. "However, I don't look for any undue complications in this case."

"Make whatever arrangements are necessary," Molla told him. "I must make a telephone call to New York."

Tay opened his eyes and blinked a couple of times. He turned his head slightly and stared at Molla. "Hey," he said weakly, "what goes on?"

"You must be quiet," she told him. "You had a nasty bump on your head, but you are going to be all right. You are in a hospital."

"Hospital? Nuts. I'm not that badly off. Where are the others?"

She interrupted him by placing a finger over his lips.

"Jack and Vivian stayed here with us; the rest we sent on to New York. I telephoned your father," Molla said. "He was worried, of course, but I convinced him it would not be necessary for him to come down here."

"How long must I remain here?"

"For a day or two, while you are under observation. You still have a fever."

"Yeah, I must," he muttered. "My lips are like parchment."

"I'll send the nurse to sponge your face. I must go now."

When Molla returned much later, Tay was restlessly asleep. Even as she watched him in the small light of a shaded lamp, he grew more fidgety. He mumbled something, then again. The mumbling became a little more clear. Molla leaned forward, tense, at the sound of her name.

For a minute Tay was silent. Then he began again. Just disconnected phrases at first, but gradually the phrases began to make a little sense.

There was a tight expression on

Molla's face as she listened. She bit her lip once, hard, until she thought the blood would come.

She felt as though she shouldn't be listening, as though she were eavesdropping. Yet these things Tay was saying—they concerned her. Or did they? Might they not be the strange fragments of an injured man's semi-delirium? She hoped with all her heart that they were.

Then Tay was silent again. His breathing became more regular. Molla stood up. There was an added weariness in her eyes that hadn't been there before.

The next night they boarded a Pullman for New York, with Tay in a private compartment.

"I'll bet you'll be glad to get home," Vivian said to Molla.

"Home? You mean New York, don't you?" Molla stared out the window as the train picked up speed. Slowly the lights of the town slipped past. Then faster, faster, until they were out in the darkened countryside.

"Somehow," said Molla slowly, "somehow I do not as yet look upon New York as home! To me it still is a refuge, a temporary refuge at that."

"You oughtn't to feel that way. Certainly there will be nothing temporary about being Mrs. Taylor Whitworth."

"Mrs. Taylor Whitworth," Molla mused. "No, I hope it isn't temporary," she said with a short laugh. Molla leaned back and clasped her hand behind her head. "I'll tell you something, Vivian, something I've never mentioned to anyone before."

"I'm flattered that you take me into your confidence."

Molla smiled. "I like you," she said simply. "I like you and all the people I have been with these past 10 days. You know, Tay said I would like most of his friends—after one unpleasant experience I had."

"But I must get back to where I started. I had no intentions of falling in love when I came to America. If anything, I wanted to avoid it. I felt as though there could be no time, no room in my life for love."

"For a long while. Not until the thought of all I had seen and felt in Europe had been erased. I didn't think it right for me to be enjoying the great happiness that love would bring while my mother and friends had so little to look forward to. Perhaps you can understand."

Vivian nodded. "Yes, I do, but Molla, you're so terribly wrong. You mustn't feel that way. You mustn't. Certainly I'm not the one to advise you, but if there's anything you can't run away from it's love. Especially when you've met the right man."

Molla looked out the window again. "The right man. Yes, of course, the right man. I can see how that would play a big part."

"Well—we argue so terribly much and he likes to tease, but he's a dear. I wouldn't trade him for a prince."

Vivian shot a sharp glance at Molla after a moment of silence. "Is there something else you're trying to tell me?"

Molla shook her head. "No, nothing. I thought, at first—no, there is nothing," she concluded.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitworth met them at Grand Central station with an ambulance the next afternoon. "Oh, my darling," Agatha half wailed as she planted a kiss on Tay's cheek.

Tay grimaced. "I'm okay. Just a scratch and a bump. H. Dad."

Tay reached for his father's hand as Agatha turned to Molla. She kissed Molla lightly. "I just know what a terrible experience it must have been," she said.

"Yes," Burton Whitworth put in. "Mother has been in dozens of plane crashes in her day. She's the voice of experience when it comes to crash landings in a swamp."

Agatha glared at her husband and Tay laughed out loud, but immediately winced. "Ouch. Don't make me laugh like that. It still hurts."

"You'll stay here for a couple of days while you bounce back to normal," Burton Whitworth said to Molla when they arrived at the house.

Molla stretched luxuriously in the bathtub and wished she could remain there for hours. The hot water and suds enveloped her in a deep, comforting manner. When she got out of the tub she wrapped herself in a big terrycloth robe and stretched on her bed.

Molla woke with a start. It was almost time for dinner. She dressed and went downstairs. She started to turn on the radio in the music room, but before she got there a voice behind her said, "Howdy, stranger. I hardly recognized you under all that sun-tan. What did they do—paint it on you?"

Molla wheeled around, a delighted smile on her face. "Nell," she said. "I almost forgot about you. Forgive me, please."

NO POLITICS HERE

PATRICK J. Hurley, secretary of war under Hoover, has just been appointed a brigadier-general by President Roosevelt. He will not have command of a regular army unit, but will serve as a special agent.

The appointment emphasizes anew the non-partisan character of this war. With such well-known Republicans in high position as Secretaries Stimson and Knox, Lieutenant-General Knudsen, and now Hurley, there is no place left for everyday partisan sniping.

Not all our other wars have been free of politics. Though Lincoln appointed McClellan, a Democrat, to the chief command of the army, it was thought necessary to pick some other generals whose chief recommendations were political. Banks had been speaker of the House of Representatives, McClernand and Butler had been prominent War Democrats and therefore had followings whom it was desired to win over. Fremont was the former Republican candidate for the presidency. None of these appointments turned out well.

The Spanish War, too, had its political favorites. General Shafter, who was so fat that he could not sit a horse, was in charge of the Cuban campaign, instead of the far more capable Nelson A. Miles.

President Wilson turned his back on such undesirable precedents. World War I had no political generals. It is fortunate that President Roosevelt is following his example.

A SOLID FRONT

THE success of the "good neighbor" policy that we have pursued is seen in the practically unanimous front that the Latin American nations are presenting against the axis powers. Time has been when jealousy of the United States would have combined with mutual rivalries to make any solid phalanx impossible, and would have provided a fertile field for Nazi intrigues.

Even Argentina and Chile, which have sought modifications of the anti-axis manifesto, are not really exceptions. Their stand is apparently not actuated either by love of Germany or hatred of this country, but by the internal problems they face, thanks to the infiltration of Germans and Italians. The Pan-American conference has brought to pass the boast of Canning, the English statesman who encouraged the United States to proclaim the Monroe Doctrine: "I called the New World into being to redress the balance of the Old."

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles F. Stewart

REFERENCES to World War I and World War II are deprecated by some few commentators, on the ground that designating wars by number implies acceptance of the acceptance of them as inevitable forever, or on until the world's end, anyway.

There isn't as much of this kind of talk now, though, as there was during World War I. There was a lot of it then, and "Never again" was a regular motto for a matter of years after the end of that particular war. I experience today there isn't enough pacifism in the atmosphere to speak of. Even the pre-Pearl Harbor isolationists mostly are all-out belligerents at the situation's present stage.

Now, will we have another pacifistic epidemic following experience No. 2, as we did the last time?

I'm inclined to doubt it. My impression is that critics of war-numbering are right—that the generality of folk are converts to the proposition that vast conflicts are a certainty, about every so often, as long as the earth continues to be inhabited by human beings.

Wars didn't use to have to be numbered. They were numerous, but comparatively local—the Rev-

NELSON PROVES HE'S BOSS

WASHINGTON—Next to the President, Jesse Jones has long been the most powerful official in Washington. Secretary of Commerce, head of the Federal Loan Agency, the Defense Plant Corporation and half a dozen other potent government bodies, the velvet-voiced Texan on more than one occasion even has disregarded the White House.

But it looks like at last Jones has met his master.

Behind the scenes, he and War Production Chief Donald Nelson had a crossing of swords and Jones definitely came off second best.

It happened this way: In organizing his administrative set-up, Nelson asked the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and Defense Plant Corporation to designate an official to act as their top production executive. These officials deal directly with Nelson on all production problems of their agencies.

Lieut. Gen. Knudsen acts in this capacity for the Army; Admiral Robinson for the Navy; Admiral Vickers for the Maritime Commission; and Director Charles Henderson for the Defense Plant Corporation.

In addition to this, Nelson also informed the four agencies that he was attaching one of his personal assistants to the staff of these four officials, to act as his personal representative and to keep him informed of what was going on. The Army, Navy and Maritime Commission readily agreed and promised cordial cooperation.

But Jones, who had secretly had his cap set for Nelson's job, balked on such supervision of the Defense Plant Corporation.

According to the inside story he declared he was not going to put up with any "snooping Gestapo agent." To which Nelson is reported to have replied quietly that if Jones didn't like it, he could take the matter to the President.

Jones did not accept this challenge. He backed down and Nelson's man is now keeping an eagle eye on the DPC.

Note: When Nelson wrote the executive order arming him with wide powers to operate as war production czar, he very carefully included a provision giving him authority over Jones. The lawyers who made the first draft of the order omitted this, but Nelson personally inserted it. As an OPM official, he has seen Jones hold up urgently needed rubber, aluminum and tin programs, and Nelson was taking no chances on making certain who was boss.

"Yeah, I must," he muttered. "My lips are like parchment."

"I'll send the nurse to sponge your face. I must go now."

When Molla returned much later, Tay was restless asleep. Even as she watched him in the small light of a shaded lamp, he grew more fitful. He mumbled something, then again. The mumbling became a little more clear. Molla leaned forward, tense, at the sound of her name.

For a minute Tay was silent. Then he began again. Just disconnected phrases at first, but gradually the phrases began to make a little sense.

"There was a tight expression on

Molla's face as she listened. She bit her lip once, hard, until she thought the blood would come.

She felt as though she shouldn't be listening, as though she were eavesdropping. Yet these things Tay was saying—these things he was saying—concerned her. Or did they? Might they not be the strange figments of an injured man's semi-delirium? She hoped with all her heart that they were.

Then Tay was silent again. His breathing became more regular. Molla stood up. There was an added weariness in her eyes that hadn't been there before.

The next night they boarded a Pullman for New York, with Tay in a private compartment.

"I'll bet you'll be glad to get home," Vivian said to Molla.

"Home? You mean New York, don't you?" Molla stared out the window as the train picked up speed. Slowly the lights of the town slipped past. Then faster, faster, until they were out in the darkened countryside.

"Somehow," said Molla slowly, "somehow I do not as yet look upon New York as home! To me it still is a refuge, a temporary refuge at that."

"You oughtn't to feel that way. Certainly there will be nothing temporary about being Mrs. Taylor Whitworth."

"Mrs. Taylor Whitworth," Molla mused. "No, I hope it isn't temporary," she said with a short laugh.

Molla leaned back and clasped her hand behind her head. "I'll tell you something, Vivian, something I've never mentioned to anyone before."

"I'm flattered that you take me into your confidence."

Molla smiled. "I like you," she said simply. "I like you and all the people I have been with these past 10 days. You know, Tay said I would like most of his friends—after one unpleasant experience I had."

"But I must get back to where I started. I had no intentions of falling in love when I came to America. If anything, I wanted to avoid it. I felt as though there could be no time, no room in my life for love . . . for a long while. Not until the thought of all I had seen and felt in Europe had been erased. I didn't think it right for me to be enjoying the great happiness that love would bring while my mother and friends had so little to look forward to. Perhaps you can understand."

Vivian nodded. "Yes, I do, but Molla, you're so terribly wrong. You mustn't feel that way. You mustn't. Certainly I'm not the one to advise you, but if there's anything you can't run away from it's love. Especially when you've met the right man."

Molla looked out the window again. "The right man. Yes, of course, the right man. I can see how that would play a big part."

"Well—we argue so terribly much and he likes to tease, but he's a dear. I wouldn't trade him for a prince."

Vivian shot a sharp glance at Molla after a moment of silence. "Is there something else you're trying to tell me?"

Molla shook her head. "No, nothing. I thought, at first—no, there is nothing," she concluded.

Mr. and Mrs. Whitworth met them at Grand Central station with an ambulance the next afternoon. "Oh, my darling," Agatha half wailed as she planted a kiss on Tay's cheek.

Tay grimaced. "I'm okay. Just a scratch and a bump. Hi, Dad."

Tay reached for his father's hand as Agatha turned to Molla. She kissed Molla lightly. "I just know what a terrible experience it must have been," she said.

"Yes," Burton Whitworth put in. "Mother has been in dozens of plane crashes in her day. She's the voice of experience when it comes to crash landings in a swamp."

Agatha glared at her husband and Tay laughed out loud, but immediately winced. "Ouch. Don't make me laugh like that. It still hurts."

"You'll stay here for a couple of days while you bounce back to normal," Burton Whitworth said to Molla when they arrived at the house.

Molla stretched luxuriously in the bathtub and wished she could remain there for hours. The hot water and suds enveloped her in a deep, comforting manner. When she got out of the tub she wrapped herself in a big terrycloth robe and stretched out on her bed.

Molla woke with a start. It was almost time for dinner. She dressed and went downstairs. She started to turn on the radio in the music room, but before she got there a voice behind her said, "Howdy, stranger. I hardly recognized you under all that sun-tan. What did they do—paint it on you?"

Molla wheeled around, a delighted smile on her face. "Neil," she said. "I almost forgot about you. Forgive me, please."

A man's failure in expressing himself verbally is directly traceable to early influence; 3. There are definite and concrete things that parents can do and can avoid doing in order to guide the child's first groping attempts at oral expression.

Mrs. Renick's talk showed comprehensive research and proved deeply interesting to the members of the group.

Mrs. Geib and Mrs. McAllister were hostesses for the luncheon meeting.

SALTCREEK SCHOOL NEWS

Beginning February 9 school will open at 9:45 and will dismiss at 4:30.

Miss Boone of the Duval schools visited our first and second grades on the forenoon of January 29.

The regular monthly teachers' meeting was held at 8 a. m. Tuesday.

Measles and colds have lowered the attendance during the last two weeks.

The school contributed in the Red Cross War Relief Fund recently.

Students are now donating books for the Victory Book Campaign. It is believed that donations will reach, on the average, one book per student.

Salt Creek met their traditional rivals, Centralia, on the Tartan floor Saturday, January 24.

The Warriors reserves gott off to a fast start and held a half time advantage of 19-4. The Centralia squad came back the second half and cut the margin down, but the final score was in favor of Salt Creek, 29-24.

After one period of play in the varsity game, Centralia was leading, 7-0. During the second period, the tide turned for Salt Creek, and the half-time score was 12-12. Both teams played more cautiously during the second half. Salt Creek forged ahead by six points in the third quarter, lost three points of that advantage in the last quarter, but managed to win at 22-25.

Friday night, January 30, the Warriors traveled to Scioto to meet Clarence Shipley's fast-stepping cagers. The reserve game was very close throughout, and the Salt Creek "Juniors" were edged out by the close score of 15-14.

The first-team game began with slow basketball, and both teams played on even terms during the first half, although Scioto held a half-time advantage of 15-19. The second half was just the opposite and both teams played a fast-breaking game, shooting with great regularity. The Scioto aggregation increased their lead slowly and were winners by a score of 46-31.

Salt Creek has an open date this week and will play their last game before the tournament Friday, February 13, at Tartan. The Williamsport teams will furnish the opposition.

SCIOTO TWP. SCHOOL NEWS

The Athletic association of Scioto sponsored a basketball game Tuesday night, January 27, for the benefit of the March of Dimes. The varsity team played the King Jewelers, and the reserve team played the junior high team. The following played on the King Jewelers team, Carl Gulick, Harold Gulick, Bob Hill, Ernest Ankrom, Carroll Reed and Bill Thrallkill. Our team lost by a score of 23-47. The total net proceeds was $11.45. We consider this a good basketball game for a good cause.

The Sophomore class met January to select class rings. They will receive the rings the first month of school next term.

Senior tests were given to the members of the senior class last week for the purpose of determining what subjects the pupils were the weakest in. These tests proved quite successful.

It is expected that some high school pupils will enter the essay

SALTCREEK SCHOOL NEWS

Beginning February 9 school will open at 9:45 and will dismiss at 4:30.

Miss Boone of the Duval schools visited our first and second grades on the forenoon of January 29.

The regular monthly teachers' meeting was held at 8 a. m. Tuesday.

Measles and colds have lowered the attendance during the last two weeks.

The school contributed in the Red Cross War Relief Fund recently.

Students are now donating books for the Victory Book Campaign. It is believed that donations will reach, on the average, one book per student.

Salt Creek met their traditional rivals, Centralia, on the Tarlton floor Saturday, January 24. The Warriors reserves go off to a fast start and held a half-time advantage of 19-4. The Centralia squad came back the second half and cut the margin down, but the final score was in favor of Salt Creek, 29-24.

After one period of play in the varsity game, Centralia was leading, 7-0. During the second period, the tide turned for Salt Creek, and the half-time score was 12-12. Both teams played more cautiously during the second half. Salt Creek forged ahead by six points in the third quarter, lost three points of that advantage in the last quarter, but managed to win at 22-25.

Friday night, January 30, the Warriors traveled to Scioto to meet Clarence Shipley's fast-stepping cagers. The reserve game was very close throughout, and the Salt Creek "Juniors" were edged out by the close score of 15-14.

The first-team game began with slow basketball, and both teams played on even terms during the first half, although Scioto held a half-time advantage of 15-19. The second half was just the opposite and both teams played a fast-breaking game, shooting with great regularity. The Scioto aggregation increased their lead slowly and were winners by a score of 46-31.

Salt Creek has an open date this week and will play their last game before the tournament Friday, February 13, at Tarlton. The Williamsport teams will furnish the opposition.

SCIOTO TWP. SCHOOL NEWS

The Athletic association of Scioto sponsored a basketball game Tuesday night, January 27, for the benefit of the March of Dimes. The varsity team played the King Jewelers, and the reserve team played the junior high team. The following played on the King Jewelers team, Carl Gulick, Harold Gulick, Bob Hill, Ernest Ankrom, Carroll Reed and Bill Thrallkill. Our team lost by a score of 23-47. The total net proceeds was $11.45. We consider this a good basketball game for a good cause.

The Sophomore class met January to select class rings. They will receive the rings the first month of school next term. Senior tests were given to the members of the senior class last week for the purpose of determining what subjects the pupils were the weakest in. These tests proved quite successful.

It is expected that some high school pupils will enter the essay

By International News Service

The hotly contested basketball race for the titular crown of the Ohio Conference may veer sharply from its present course and upset the clean slates of two first division quintets as a result of tonight's conference games.

Leading the pack with eight victories and no losses, Mt. Union's Purple Raiders tackle Muskingum in New Concord on the Muskies home court, while Capital, led with Wooster and Baldwin Wallace for second place with an unmarred record of six games, travels to the ballcock of Dennison for tonight's court fray.

On the strength of past performances and the impaired records of their opposition, both Mt. Union and Capital should chalk up another victory apiece and keep the conference loop in its present state of suspended rivalry.

The national motto this winter is "freeze everything."

Production Of Peas In County To Be Boosted

20 Percent Increase May Be Recorded As Result Of Federal Plan

MINIMUM PRICE SET UP

Government To Buy Canned Product Under New Output Program

Pickaway county pea growers are aiming at a production increase of 20 percent over 1941.

John G. Boggs, chairman of the local war board, declared Wednesday that the U. S. department of agriculture, through the agricultural marketing administration, will purchase all quantities of 1942 canned peas offered to it by canners who have been certified by the Ohio U.S.D.A. war board as having agreed by contract to pay growers at least the minimum fair price set up by the board. Under these conditions the department will purchase canned peas through October 31, 1942, at the base price of $1.10 per dozen No. 2 cans, Alaska or Sweet's, f.o.b. cannery, for U. S. Grade C canned peas.

The local chairman emphasized that the minimum fair price scale to growers for peas does not represent a ceiling on pea prices, and that canners and growers may negotiate for different prices provided these prices are above the minimum fair price scale set up by the board.

Minimum fair prices for peas were established by the Ohio U.S.D.A. war board at the request of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The department asked that the minimum prices for peas should represent an increase of at least $17.50 a ton over comparable average 1940 prices found by the board to have been paid to growers in Ohio.

For ungraded peas delivered at the cannery, major grading or assembly point, and with all seed costs absorbed by the canner, pea growers will receive a minimum price of $45 a ton, Mr. Boggs said.

The minimum fair price with all seed costs absorbed by the canner, for peas graded on the percentage of No. 1 and No. 2 sieve sizes for Alaska peas, and for No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3 sieve sizes for sweet peas, shall be: $65.00 per ton for peas having 35 percent or over passing stated sieve sizes; $55.00 per ton for peas having 25 percent to 34.9 percent passing stated sieve sizes; $45.00 per ton for peas having 15 percent to 24.9 percent passing stated sieve sizes; $35.00 per ton for peas having 14.9 percent or less passing stated sieve sizes.

PASTORS LEARN SURVEY DETAILS

County Pastors Say Their Sunday School, Church Attendance Better

Favorable results from their recent survey of Sunday school and church attendance in the city and county were reported by members of the Pickaway county Ministerial Association during their meeting Tuesday in Betz' restaurant.

The Rev. Neil Peterson, chairman of the Ministerial association, said that several of the city and county ministers reported increases in their Sunday school and church attendance as a result of the survey.

One Sunday school class instructor reported that his class of young folk had grown from four to sixteen since the survey. A Sunday school superintendent said his school had grown from an attendance of 22 to eighty-five or ninety.

The survey was conducted through the cooperation of the county superintendent, George D. McDowell, the Circleville superintendent, Frank Fischer, and the rural school superintendents and teachers. Each week during the last several months, school pupils were asked whether or not they had attended church or Sunday school the Sunday before. A report of the survey was compiled as a result of the figures sent in by the school superintendents. According to the report, 68 percent of the school children of the city and county did not attend Sunday school and 73 percent of them did not attend church. In Circleville, where 1,517 pupils were questioned, 575 reported that they attended Sunday school and 344 reported that they attended church services. A copy of the report was mailed to every box holder in the county.

Ministers Tuesday decided to continue their survey and the Rev. Mr. Peterson said that another census of Sunday school and church attendance would be taken in the city and county schools in the near future.

At the end of the school year, a complete survey will be made and figures of the last census compared with those of the first.

City and county pastors voted thanks Tuesday to the school authorities who had cooperated with them in compiling their report.

Community Meeting Finds Many Committees Going About Duties

MANY ANGLES COVERED

Plane Site Sale Big One; Village Child Injured By Hot Water

Only a small crowd composed chiefly of members of the various committees attended the Defense Council meeting in the school auditorium.

C. A. Higley and Harold Bowers gave preliminary talks in which was emphasized the importance of the Defense Council and urged the immediate preparation of the different departments for efficient performance of their duties.

Mayor Fred Hines announced his appointments to the various committees which will set up to operate the defense machinery and called on some of them for reports.

E. F. Schlegel gave an encouraging report regarding housing and remarked that residents of the community had registered 47 rooms for rental purposes. He was gratified to learn that no advantage of the situation was taken to boost rental rates and suggested that such rates be kept at regular levels.

Headley Brintlinger reported that preliminary steps have been taken to get the communication system geared to operate in case of emergency, and will have more to report on public utilities at the next meeting.

Harry Grove, executive director of the council, gave an interesting talk on the necessity of first-aid training as carried on by the Red Cross. Mr. Grove said a training course in Ashville would soon be started. The completion of a twenty-hour course entitles the trainee to a certificate showing proficiency in first-aid work. The course would cover five weeks comprising two, two-hour sessions each week. It was emphasized by Mr. Grove that only the younger adults who could be called away from their homes should take the courses. The course is open to both male and female and would be conducted by a local doctor.

Eugene Borror, chairman of the tire rationing board, outlined the methods of making application for tires and reported that two new tires thus far have been approved by his committee. Blanks for application for tires can be had by calling at the Cooper filling station and contacting Nolo Gulick, a member of the committee. Mr. Borror's board is known as No. 6.

E. W. Seeds was called on to speak about Defense Bonds and explained in detail the importance of buying bonds and stamps. He assured his listeners that Defense Bonds are the safest kind of investment today.

Cans Valuable
C. E. Mahaffey outlined in general a plan whereby waste materials would be salvaged in the community and included paper, rags, rubber and iron. While he mentioned in his report that tin cans were not to be saved, other persons explained that tin cans are valuable to save in this territory and that boys of the community are making good wages gathering and selling the cans.

The audience was reminded by F. D. Ritchie that unwanted books could be left at Clyde Brinker's store and that they would be given to the Army for libraries, recreation rooms, etc. It was pointed out by Mr. Higley that the school is also collecting books and magazines for this purpose.

Mr. Hines, feeling that much more discussion and planning are necessary to get the committees into working operation, called another defense meeting for Monday, February 16, at 8 o'clock at the school auditorium. At this meeting reports from committee chairmen will be made and progress checked.

Mr. Bower brought two films from the state department of education and these were shown at the beginning and close of the meeting. They were patriotic pictures and very interesting.

Ashville
The Walter Wright public sale of farm chattels held at his recent home, now a part of the airplane field, was very largely attended, the many contacted saying that it was the largest sale they had ever attended. George K. Wright, former bank employee here, now with the Farm Bureau office force in Columbus, was sales cashier and told us that the total cash receipts amounted to near nine thousand dollars. Prices ruled high all the way through, he told us.

Ashville
E. F. and Mrs. Martin who have spent the last few weeks at several points in the south, have returned home and much pleased with their trip. . . Luther Cooper, out of the going for several weeks, spending part time in the hospital, is home here again and able to be about. . . Gary Franks, three year old son of Ralph and Mrs. Franks, was severely scalded over his body by coming in contact with a bucket of hot water at the Franks home on Jefferson avenue, Tuesday afternoon.

Ashville
For the last couple of days, a squad of some fifty men has been at work up at the airplane field clearing away fences and other obstructions that may interfere with the construction work proper. From a reliable source it was learned that the airfield land owners are now being paid for their holdings.

Ashville
Postmaster Smith since yesterday is selling his fifth, 200-batch of federal auto stamps. Sales have slowed down to a mere walk now, compared to Saturday when business was really brisk.

Ashville
A fine, large picture of him and his soldier boy company came through to the home of Frank and Mrs. Deem, Madison, and from their son, Emerson, who is a part of the camp boys stationed at Camp Wheeler, near Macon, Georgia. And the best part of it all, he said in his letter that he had just won a fine, shiny medal for his showing as a "sharp-shooter." And he thinks Hitler would better keep well hid when he gets over there, or else.

SCHOOL NEWS

The Junior class has selected its play entitled "Meet the Folks." It will be given some time in March.

Ashville
The Sophomore class is collecting papers and magazines for the boys in camp. They are getting quite a supply from the people. Keep giving them some!

Ashville
There have been around an average of 75 a day buying their lunches at the school cafeteria.

Glenn Malone, one of the former Junior classmen, who is now in Uncle Sam's Navy, has been corresponding with the Junior class and other members of the high school.

MORT ROONEY AND TWO SONS TO AID UNCLE SAM

Mort Rooney, Columbus, son of Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Rooney, East Union street, is preparing to sign up for service under Uncle Sam's colors when the next registration of men between 20 and 45 is conducted by selective service. Rooney, president of the Ohio Rainbow Division veterans' association, served in the World War under General Douglas MacArthur, the hero of Luzon.

Signing up with Rooney will be four other officers of the association. All five were in their 'teens when the Rainbow went abroad in 1917.

Mr. Rooney's two sons, Charles and John, are also eligible for service, the former being registered now and awaiting call and the latter having enlisted 10 days ago in the aviation corps.

Somebody asks what "total war" is. Probably it's that "demonstration total" we've always heard about.

Production Of Peas In County To Be Boosted

20 Percent Increase May Be Recorded As Result Of Federal Plan

MINIMUM PRICE SET UP

Government To Buy Canned Product Under New Output Program

Pickaway county pea growers are aiming at a production increase of 20 percent over 1941.

John G. Boggs, chairman of the local war board, declared Wednesday that the U. S. department of agriculture, through the agricultural marketing administration, will purchase all quantities of 1942 canned peas offered to it by canners who have been certified by the Ohio U.S.D.A. war board as having agreed by contract to pay growers at least the minimum fair price set up by the board. Under these conditions the department will purchase canned peas through October 31, 1942, at the base price of $1.10 per dozen No. 2 cans, Alaska or Sweet's, f.o.b. cannery, for U. S. Grade C canned peas.

The local chairman emphasized that the minimum fair price scale to growers for peas does not represent a ceiling on pea prices, and that canners and growers may negotiate for different prices provided these prices are above the minimum fair price scale set up by the board.

Minimum fair prices for peas were established by the Ohio U.S.D.A. war board at the request of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The department asked that the minimum prices for peas should represent an increase of at least $17.50 a ton over comparable average 1940 prices found by the board to have been paid to growers in Ohio.

For ungraded peas delivered at the cannery, major grading or assembly point, and with all seed costs absorbed by the canner, pea growers will receive a minimum price of $45 a ton, Mr. Boggs said.

The minimum fair price with all seed costs absorbed by the canner, for peas graded on the percentage of No. 1 and No. 2 sieve sizes for Alaska peas, and for No. 1, and No. 2 and No. 3 sieve sizes for sweet peas, shall be: $55.00 per ton for peas having 35 percent or over passing stated sieve sizes; $55.00 per ton for peas having 25 percent to 34.9 percent passing stated sieve sizes; $45.00 per ton for peas having 15 percent to 24.9 percent passing stated sieve sizes; $35.00 per ton for peas having 14.9 percent or less passing stated sieve sizes.

Only a small crowd composed chiefly of members of the various committees attended the Defense Council meeting in the school auditorium.

C. A. Higley and Harold Bowers gave preliminary talks in which was emphasized the importance of the Defense Council and urged the immediate preparation of the different departments for efficient performance of their duties.

Mayor Fred Hines announced his appointments to the various committees which will set up to operate the defense machinery and called on some of them for reports.

E. F. Schlegel gave an encouraging report regarding housing and remarked that residents of the community had registered 47 rooms for rental purposes. He was gratified to learn that no advantage of the situation was taken to boost rental rates and suggested that such rates be kept at regular levels.

Hoadley Brintlinger reported that preliminary steps have been taken to get the communication system geared to operate in case of emergency, and will have more to report on public utilities at the next meeting.

Harry Grove, executive director of the council, gave an interesting talk on the necessity of first-aid training as carried on by the Red Cross.
